Sexting: Flirting or Felony?

Alison Feigh, MS

Jacob Wetterling Resource Center, a program of Zero Abuse Project

Social media is not going away. As social media adapts and changes, young people are either creating the adaptations or adapting right along with it. Professionals can face a steep learning curve as they attempt to respond to new risks in the lives of the young people they serve. This presentation provides tools to help professionals get on the front end of the problem of youth sending and receiving sexual material before they are faced head on with challenging mental health or criminal scenarios.

The presentation will detail the risks children are facing and provide case studies, tools, and best practices for professionals working to respond.

ABOUT THE PRESENTER

Alison Feigh, MS, is the Director of Jacob Wetterling Resource Center, a program of Zero Abuse Project. In her role as a subject matter expert on child and teen safety, she works with students, parents, youth workers, faith leaders, law enforcement and the media to help prevent childhood abuse and abductions. Alison's work also includes writing curriculum for youth- serving organizations, training professionals about online challenges kids face and advocating for families of the missing.
