Harold William Schroetter

On February 28, 2009, Harold Schroetter, 57, went missing from his residence in Falcon Heights, MN. He was a postal worker in St. Paul and had never missed work unexplained prior to his disappearance. Harold was in the process of ending his relationship with his live-in girlfriend and changing the beneficiaries of his state at the time of his disappearance. He was also excited to recently find out he was to become a grandfather. Authorities located Schroetter's red Chrysler, pictured above left, under suspicious circumstances in the area of Arlington Ave. and Jackson St. in St. Paul on March 1, 2009. Authorities believe foul play was involved in the disappearance of Harold Schroetter and he is believed to be deceased at this time. Through extensive investigation, authorities have been unable to locate Schroetter. Blood from Schroetter was found in the trunk of his girlfriend's car, which is the white Chrysler 300, pictured above right. A new trunk linker was found to have been purchased and replaced shortly after his disappearance.
